HISTÓRIA DO CONCELHO DE TAVIRA
Existem registos da presença humana no concelho de Tavira no período Neolítico (de 4 000 a 1 500 BC). É no litoral deste concelho que se dá o maior povoamento após a conquista romana (séc. 1 BC), devido à importância económica da pesca e da indústria de salga de peixe. Durante o domínio islâmico (sécs. VIII a XIII), Tavira torna-se uma das principais povoações do Algarve, consequência do valor estratégico do seu castelo e do seu porto. Em 1242 os cavaleiros da Ordem Militar de Sant'Iago ocupam Tavira, prosseguindo a reconquista cristã iniciada com a tomada de posse da vizinha Cacela. Nos sécs. XV e XVI Tavira torna-se no principal porto de apoio às guarnições portuguesas. Neste período, recebe várias visitas régias e em 1520 é elevada a cidade. O progressivo assoreamento da ligação com o mar, impedindo a entrada de navios, e os estragos do terramoto de 1755 são alguns dos fatores que contribuíram para, Tavira ter perdido grande parte da sua importância económica, nos finais do séc. XVIII. A pesca do atum e a indústria de conservas deram nova vida à cidade nas últimas décadas do séc. XIX. Hoje o turismo e a pesca constituem as bases da economia da região.

HISTORY OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF TAVIRA

There are records of human presence in the municipality of Tavira in the Neolithic period (from 4000 to 1500 BC). It was on the coast of this municipality that the population settled most after the Roman conquest (1st century BC), due to the economic importance of fishing and the fish-salting industry. During Islamic rule (13th to 18th centuries), Tavira became one of the main towns in the Algarve, as a consequence of the strategic value of its castle and port. In 1242 the knights of the Military Order of Sant'Iago occupied Tavira, continuing the Christian reconquest that begun with the neighboring Cacela.

In the 15th and 16th centuries Tavira becomes the main support port for the Portuguese garrisons. During this period, it receives several royal visits and in 1520 it is elevated to city status. The progressive silting up of the connection with the sea, preventing the entry of ships and the damage caused by the 1755 earthquake are some of the factors that contributed to Tavira losing much of its economic importance at the end of the 18th century. Tuna fishing and the canning industry gave new life to the city in the last decades of the 19th century. Today tourism and fishing are the basis of the region's economy.
